If CIA develops a target who is in the US before 9-11 — dir of CIA has to pass info to the FBI —

no sharing till 1993

all FBI gets is a "lead"

FBI put on back-burner since Mueller questioned

It's my guess that over there's no way that a machine can spot a "terrorist" — a human mind has to decide, — if it then gets passed to FBI — NSA doesn't have investigators mainstream opinion: "criminal justice"

We can't use decisions, we can't use Miranda

We have to rely on CIA, ^{NSA} FBI — and really, Special Ops / DOD — "secret police"

Secrecy is the big problem

When you get "secret" police, what drops out of the say you have a strong belief (Mousaoui) that one party is a terrorist the idea that someone may later look at this memo, in decision, is a huge mechanism that brings justiciableness out of the picture big cases, big problems, little cases, little problems no cases, no problems

"false ~~policy~~ posture" needle in the haystack - need less ^{not more} hay, it doesn't pay to add hay

Flooding your reports

Louis Fried, expense after 9-11 (he retired a few months) until before 9-11 was like a fire-hose - you can't get a drink

CR "It's Morgan Falls, now."

But a memo on Moussawi actually got up from a lowly FBI agent up to George Tenet in two steps - "a shining needle"
